

Poetry.
BEAR AND FORBEAR.
Be careful, ye, whose wedded hearts Are lovingly united;
Be heedful lest an enemy Stal on you uninvited.
A little, only, whisper forth, With graceful, hushing voice—Or, counting in a different guise, A thorn among the roses!
Be careful, ye, whose marriage bells Now merrily are ringing; Be heedful of the bitter word, The sword of scolding stinging—The sharp rebuke, the angry eye, The vivid lightning flashing—The rock on which so many hopes Are daily, hourly, dashing!
"Bear and forbear,"—the only way To tread life's path's together.
Then come, and welcome, shining sun,
Or come, dark, cloudy weather;
Two wedded hearts, conjoined in one,
That cannot live asunder.
Have you Love's armor on—O, world, look on and wonder!

Cosmetics.
Women are mad after charms that have a fictitious value, and the unguents, bath, and devices they use to make themselves look like clay instead of flesh are wonderful to hear. The most successful victims of beauty, disdaining these arts, have told the secrets of the toilets with the utmost un-reserve.
Paris ladies bind thin slices of raw beef on their faces overnight to preserve the brilliance and softness of their cheeks.
This is better than Elizabeth of Hungary's little secret of bathing in blood to restore the whiteness of her skin, for which Her Majesty found the blood of new-born vir-gins most efficient.
Mme. Vestris slept with her face down in a paste of white of eggs, alum, and almond oil, which gave firmness to the skin and kept off wrinkles. This lady was the same who had her white satin boots sewed on her feet so as to fit perfectly when she danced in the ballet, and very likely she learned and practiced the secrets of the dancers of Madrid, who anointed their legs with the fat of stags to make their limbs sinewy and strong.
But the Parisians are the wonderful for cosmetics, unless indeed we except the Viennese ladies who go to arsenic springs to drink the waters which make them of such such magic and fatal whiteness. The ladies who were companions of Mme. Walden used to dose themselves with quicksilver, to be fair in the face, and perhaps the picture-like pink and white beauty which won the Dutch King's wondering admiration owed something to this secret. It seems incredible that girls in our own country to-day commit follies as great for the sake of having a magnolia complexion. But for the repeated inquiries made to a writer on cosmetics for something to make the skin pale one must believe that the morbid pallor results from disease, smoking, and dissi-pation generally has an equally morbid fascination for some minds.
The same effects are found at less cost by spreading the face and shoulders with a salve made principally of wax in which talc powder or brimstone are incorporated.
The salve prevents the powder from rubbing off, and adds polish and brilliancy to the surface. Here it becomes a necessity, following the wake of other writers on the subject, to tell or at least hint at the story of the young officer who came home from a ball with a mysterious streak of white grease on one shoulder and arm of his new regimental coat. The innocent went to aunt Dora, the old colored woman who mended for the company, and told his trouble. "Law, honey," said that consoler, "you've been puttin' your arm round some gal's shoulder an' the tallow candle's come off." Of course he had to be told the practice of Southern beauties to rub their skin with a bit of tallow to make the powder stay on, for which an end of a candle was usually most convenient. How interesting it would be to be introduced to the beautiful old foggy who hears this story for the first time.
The so-called enamels now used for the face are merely preparations of glycerine with a little clear varnish, with which liniment is mixed or powder of talc. The glycerine keeps the gum from drying too soon and cracking, while the talc holds the mineral white and gives that transparency on which the enamel depends. A famous Enamel de Paris which sold four years ago as high as $3 a bottle, was refined glycerine and rose-water, with a few drops of tincture of cantharides. The latter gradually ate away the coarse outer skin while the glycerine protected the new which formed under it. A wonderful white glycerine sold at present for the same purpose has the same talc powder dissolved in the harmless liquid, and it of course dries on the skin, leaving the latter fair to behold.
The use of cosmetics grows more general year by year. The foreign ladies teach women here the use of such things, by example, if not advice, and once tried it is almost impossible to resist temptation to continue them. No trade is more profitable than that of the perfumier who sells these things. The price of most cosmetics is 500 per cent., and if Mme. Rachel should come here she would reckon her customers by thousands.

Clothes on Fire.
Three persons out of four would push right up to the burning individual and begin to paw with their hands without any definite aim. It is useless to tell the victim to do this or that, or call for water. In fact, it is generally best not to say a word, but to seize a blanket or any woven fabric—if none is at hand, take any woolen material—hold the corners as far apart as you can, stretch them out higher than your head, and running boldly to the person, make a motion of clasping in the arms, mostly about the shoulder. This instantly smothers the fire and saves the face. The next instant throw the person on the floor. This is an additional safety to the face and breath, and any remnant of flame can be put out more leisurely. The next instant immerse the burnt part in cold water, and all pain will cease with the rapidity of lightning. Next get some common flour, remove from the water, and cover the burnt parts with an inch in thickness of flour; if possible, put the patient to bed, and do all that is possible to soothe until the physician arrives. Let the flour remain until it falls off of itself, when a beautiful new skin can be found. Unless the burns are deep, no other applications are needed. The dry flour for burns is the most admirable remedy ever proposed, and the information ought to be imparted to all. The principle of its action is, that like the water, it causes instant and perfect relief from pain by totally excluding the air from the injured parts.

Labels through Postal Cards.
A person was recently convicted in London of a "gross and most atrocious libel" on his own niece, he sending her a postal card containing an accusation of immoral conduct, for which he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars. The young woman was one of eleven children, and at the time, on account of the ill health of her father, was supporting herself by working in a respectable refreshment room. The uncle had written her an ordinary letter on the subject, and afterward sent her a postal card, thus maliciously and cruelly conveying to her associates and employers his own unjust suspicions.
The result was that the girl lost her place, was brought into disesteem, and, if the charge had been true, would have been prevented ever after from associating with honest women. The judge who passed the sentence compared the act of the prisoner to robbery with needless violence, and regretted that the law did not permit him to order the rascal to be flogged.
A general abuse of the postal card system in this way would make it an intolerable nuisance. We do not believe that its adoption in this country will lead to many similar violations of its purpose. Here and there, however, some malicious person will vent his spite in this way, just as now persons are found base enough to print and sell indecent newspapers. Against these isolated and exceptional outbreaks of libelous vulgarity, we must look to our courts of justice for a remedy, to whose attention we commend the English case.

A Warm Doe.
A Danbury man is the unenvied owner of a dog that is a terror to the neighbors, purely by his snapping propensities. He snaps at everybody, and knows a little something of the flavor of everybody's up that way.
It is estimated that he has cloth enough in him to make a pair of breeches for everybody on Long Island Sound. The other day a youth loaded up the end of a stick with a mixture compounded with horse radish and cayenne pepper, and commenced shaking it through the fence at the cur, and the cur flew up and caught the bait savagely, and the boy drew the stick away so sharply that it left the contents in the animal's mouth, and the animal chewed away on it in awful exultation for an instant. Then it commenced to stare, and then spit, and howl, and weep, and paw and roll over, and finally run under the barn, where it remained for two days in religious seclusion. Now, when anybody pokes a stick through the fence that dog doesn't step up. He merely looks over as much as to say: "No seasoning in mine, if you please."

Death from lightning is thought to be quite painless. Owing to the velocity with which the electric current moves, it is believed that a person struck by lightning has no premonition of the blow which he receives. The nerve system requires a certain interval of time to become conscious of pain. The time of an electric discharge is but a small fraction of this interval; hence, as a sentient apparatus, the nervous system is destroyed before consciousness can set in.
